- Project Futureproof has been developed in collaboration with Gen Z contributors and skills & employability experts. It features a free-to-access digital tool that leverages vocational personality modelling to help to connect users with potential future career clusters.

More than 1 in 2 European Gen Z are concerned about their post-pandemic futures. Project Futureproof, launched in 10 countries of the Deutsche Telekom Group, including in Romania, aims to stand by Gen Z and leverage digital optimism to help enable a successful future for the next generation. It is a support platform that has been developed to demonstrate the huge potential of Gen Z and help inspire them to identify future careers, as well as uncover skills they do not know they have.

Project Futureproof has been developed in collaboration with both Gen Z contributors and a diverse group of professional skills & employability experts. It aims to connect users to peer-to-peer inspiration & support. It has been endorsed by seven-time GRAMMY award winner Billie Eilish.

"The future feels uncertain", says Billie Eilish, "but I'm always inspired by what our generation is able to achieve in the face of so many different challenges."

In a post-pandemic world, there are many uncertainties the next generation are facing; culturally, socially & economically. Research* released by Telekom shows 61% of European Gen Z are anxious about their future job and career prospects. 54% are unsure what careers will exist in the future, with 43% saying they are unsure if they have the qualities they need to succeed.

"Telekom Romania has always supported young people and has endorsed, through its initiatives, programs and strategic partnerships, the development of the young generation of professionals. In the current context, more than ever, we want to help Gen Z by providing them with digital tools that will lead young people to identify opportunities for professional development and turn their individual passions and skills into assets for the future," says Andreas Elsner, Chief Commercial Officer of Residential Marketing & National Sales Telekom Romania.

"Gen Z are stepping into a world of work that will have been fundamentally changed by both the COVID-19 pandemic and digital transformation," explains Ulrich Klenke, Chief Brand Officer at Deutsche Telekom. "We believe that it is our collective responsibility to help them navigate the opportunities & challenges they face. We want to show them that if they have a passion, they have a future."

At the heart of Project Futureproof is a free-to-access digital tool (futurefeed.telekom.com/ro-RO) that helps Gen Z to better understand their abilities and how these are connected to future career opportunities. It uses established RIASEC (vocational personality) modelling to help to connect users with potential future career clusters. The tool helps Gen Z to see how their passions, skills, talents and personality are fundamental to helping shape their future journey and how they can best use these personal attributes as part of future careers. Unlike existing services, the tool takes a uniquely Gen Z perspective, identifying key trends & changes in the world of work, delivering insights through a personalised, gamified experience.

Alongside the tool, a 'Project Futureproof' online hub also features helpful resources where Deutsche Telekom experts share insights on how to write CVs, prepare for job interviews and improve your social media profile. As Europe's most valuable Telecommunications brand, Deutsche Telekom is dedicated to supporting young people with a broad ongoing range of initiatives including dual student & apprenticeship programmes, careers & employability resources, tailored youth tariffs and localised initiatives.

Deutsche Telekom is launching an international Gen Z engagement campaign and an optimistic short film that invites young people to choose utopia over dystopia and trust that their passion will support them. Created by Saatchi & Saatchi, London, the film has a message of digital optimism hinting at the career opportunities that will naturally evolve from this generations' current passions. Set in 2021, a series of sci-fi glitches offers a group of Gen Z a vision into the future, showing a glimpse into how they (and the world around them) have been changed by following their passions. Directed by Rollo Jackson, the series of vignettes of the future harness a spirit of hope and possibility with a playful, but contemporary, nod to sci-fi. Backed by a version of Billie Eilish's 'My Future', the superstar also cameos in the future world. The campaign will be featured across a range of Gen Z focused digital and social media channels including Instagram, YouTube, Snapchat, TikTok and Spotify.

In 2020, Telekom partnered with Billie Eilish to shine a light on the power and potential of connected technology in the hands of young people. Now more than ever, Telekom wants to facilitate equal participation in social, economic and cultural life, as a key focus for the brand. Project Futureproof is the next phase of its mission to support this generation, and what they do next.
